I don't think Trump would have brought millions to DC on Jan 6th if he expected to lose

3183

1 months ago by LeftiesAreTheRacists +3183 / -0

Let's say Trump had an expectation for Pence to coward out and the votes to go against him on Jan 6th but he had a plan to somehow still end up winning. Like if he activated the military after that point and everything to this point was to justify that. But then why invite the crowd? It's a serious morale loss and he knows that Patriots are ready to go 1776 on this. It could cost some people their lives. It would make MAGA look like BLM in terms of violence instead of taking the high road like they've done so far. The move if he expected Jan 6th to be an L would be to not have the crowd.

So the results should be neutral or good on Jan 6th if everything is going to Trump's plan.

122 President Trump must know we don't have the votes to toss electors (a majority in both houses). I'm convinced he has something up his sleeve if he's telling us to go to DC. For once, he'd have boots on the ground that are loyal to him and help enforce his will.

▼ State delegations come into play only in the house if we get a contingent election. To get a contingent election, neither candidate must have 270 or more electors. In a contingent election, the house votes by state delegations to determine the president. The senate votes with one senator, one vote to determine the VP.

▼ But the contigent election would trigger if Pence opted to simply not count ANY electorals from the contested states, no? Both Xiden and Trump would be under 270.

▼ The contingent election would not trigger if Congress decides to accept the Trump electors. If they decide to have no electors from the contested states, then we get a contingent election. It wouldn't matter who has more electoral votes after the fraudulent votes are tossed.

81 ▼ If Congress certifies Biden, thats the point Trump knows there's no peaceful paths left. He will have absolutely no choice but to either call for us to go ballistic and storm Congress and arrest/kill the traitors, or call in the military to handle them, or a combination of both us and the military.

People say we're too afraid to start a revolt.. what if Trump called for it though. "The American people, go after the traitors and take your country back!" he could say.

Trump knows hes the real winner... I can't imagine him ever wanting to leave office only for satanic pedophilic communists to take over, especially when they cheated their way in.

He loves America and the American people.. would he ever let us be living in a dangerous environment if he doesn't have to let it be that way???

34 ▼ I think the worst case scenario is him simply refusing to leave the whitehouse past Jan 20th, with a protection from the people & the military as he can get. But I'd much rather take a trump card up his sleeve that gets him the win the easy way. ✓ h

20 the Constitution has our backs. it says the VP has PLENARY power tomorrow.

for your happiness I can report

In United States constitutional law, plenary power is a power that has been granted to a body or person in absolute terms, with no review of or limitations upon the exercise of that power. The assignment of a plenary power to one body divests all other bodies from the right to exercise that power, where not otherwise entitled. Plenary powers are not subject to judicial review in a particular instance or in general.

permalink parent save report block reply

▲ Legalese 1 months ago +9 / -0

9 Nowhere in the Constitution does it say the VP has a plenary 12A power. Pence's powers are definitely subject to debate and he will not have a winning argument unless there is a majority or near-majority (less Romney/Murkowski) of Senators for Trump. Pence does not have absolute authority to dismiss Biden electors; this is why it is absolutely imperative to put McConnell's balls on the chopping block tomorrow.

5 Fancy term for complete and total. In terms of the Constitution, when a power is considered plenary it means it can be exercised to its full extent and without restraint. Still up in the air whether Pence's power to reject electors is plenary, but hold on!

If 2020 democrats were featured in a zombie apocalypse movie I would have discounted the script as too outlandishly insane.

But we literally have a global pedophile ring striving to end freedom by toppling the USA, outsourcing all of its economic output, and cleansing the country racially. Even democrat Scott Weiner in commiefornia legalized gay pedophilia rape as well as knowingly giving your kids HIV. !!!!!!!!

These commies literally want to gay-rape your kids and be 'Scott-free' of any charges if the kids end up with AIDS. WTF

▼ Another perfectly reasonable explanation is that Trump knows that the optics of millions of people there supporting him will help him in a debate, with state legislatures, and with his chances in a following election should his efforts tomorrow fail. I don't believe there is some master plan that's supposed to happen, and that's not because I'm unfaithful, but it's because that's how the world works. Trump is a person that makes things happen because he puts himself in a good position to be able to do so. He can't anticipate what will happen any better than many of us, but if something fortunate does happen tomorrow, Trump will be ready and will be in a great position to be successful.
